The following rules regarding the carriage of arms by travellers going into China are published for general information:—

1. Every respectable foreigner entering China from abroad, by sea or land, may carry in his luggage, for self-defence, one pistol and one revolver and a supply of cartridges for the same not exceeding 500 rounds in all, but must declare them at the time of entry to the customs, who will release them after examination. Any contravention of this provision entails confiscation of the arms, etc., not declared.

2. Foreigners, duly provided with passports, proceeding to the interior of China, or to Tibet, Mongolia, Turkistan, etc., will be allowed to carry with them, declaration having been duly made, arms and ammunition for self-defence not exceeding twice the quantities fixed above.

3. No other arms may be imported by foreigners for self-defence under the above provisions except pistols and short-barrelled revolvers carried on the person.

4. Every respectable foreigner entering China from abroad, by sea or land, may carry in his luggage not more than three sporting guns and a supply of cartridges for the same not exceeding 3,000 rounds in all, but must declare them at the time of entry into the customs, who will release them after examination and payment of duty. Any contravention of this provision entails confiscation of the guns, etc., not declared. In the event of old guns being thus imported with fresh ammunition both may be passed free of duty.

5. The expression "Sporting guns and cartridges imported by foreigners" refers exclusively to shot guns and ammunition for same. Military arms and ammunition must not be fraudulently imported under any pretext.

(N. B.—The importation of sporting rifles is not provided for, such importation being of rare occurrence, but no difficulties will be raised whenever a request for their importation shall be addressed to the (Chinese) Commissioner of Customs through the medium of the British Consul.)
